

1)

If you win with the King then the best bet is to clear the suit by leading it again and letting dummy's Q win. Now you will have to hope to come in again with the Q Hearts or Q diamonds. And it might happen. Bear in mind though that the declarer will go out of their way to prevent you getting the lead (and cashing winning spades) so they will take finesses into your partner's hand if they can because they will know your partner has no spades left.

But the best defence is to allow declarer's Jack spade to win. After all you can see that either dummy or declarer will get a trick in spades at some point and this might be the best time to let them have that trick.

It may be that partner still has a spade left and now if either you OR partner get the lead another spade lead will beat the contract.

And it could be wrong (just about) BUT the correct continuation is a club.

You hope partner has the K clubs and didn't take it last time clubs were led in order to keep communication with you i.e. to make sure you had a club left to lead.

3) It's all about the clubs and here goes ...

you should lead a small club to the Q and when it wins....play the Ace clubs hoping the King will drop. If it does you make 13 tricks but will still give partner a blasting.

4) Overtake with the Ace.

Return the suit (partner wins with the Q).

Partner continues the heart suit and you ruff.

Later you take the K spade for 1 off.

Did that do you ?

5) Well it's an odd thing that partner suddenly thinks they can beat the contract having been silent all the way through the hand. It's possible that they have a very strong balanced hand I suppose and were lying doggo but then any lead you make will beat the contract. Actually though the double out of the blue requests a lead of dummy's first bid suit. Spades.

There is logic to this but just learning to lead dummy's first bid suit in this situation is hardly taxing I wouldn't have thought.

6) I wonder how I arrived at the figure of 80% !!! anyway I can see the best thing to do is to try to throw a heart away on the diamonds BEFORE drawing trumps.

If that passes off with no one being out of diamonds and ruffing we THEN just draw trumps. The inferior line was to lead the 10 spade for a finesse in trumps at trick 2.
